TEMPERATURE

240 °C

Ingredients

500 g wild green asparagus

8 ud slices of jamón serrano (optional)

2 pizca flaky sea salt

1 ud garlic clove

3 cda extra-virgin olive oil

1 ud lemon (for zest)

1 cdita freshly ground black pepper

30 g aged cheese for grating (optional)

Method

1 BUILD THE FIRE

Light the kamado and settle it at direct heat, 230-250 °C with the grate in place. Keep the lid closed for a few minutes so the ceramic loads up with heat; open the vents just enough for a clean fire with no flare-ups.

2 TRIM THE SPEARS

Snap off the woody base: bend each spear and it breaks exactly where it should. If they are thick, lightly peel the bottom 3-4 cm with a peeler. Pat them dry so they char instead of steaming.

3 DRESS THEM

Put the asparagus in a dish, drizzle with the olive oil, add the crushed garlic, salt and pepper, and toss with your hands until evenly coated. If you are going to use ham, hold the salt for now.

4 WRAP IN HAM

Optional: gather the asparagus into bundles of 3-4 and wrap each one in a spiral of jamón serrano, leaving the tips exposed. The slice holds the bundle together and crisps up over the coals.

5 ONTO THE GRILL

Lay the spears across the bars (or in a grilling basket) and char for 5-7 minutes, rolling them every minute and a half. They are ready when they show toasted marks, give slightly when pressed yet keep a crisp bite.

6 FINISH AND SERVE

Move the asparagus to a board, drizzle with raw olive oil and scatter over the lemon zest, flaky salt and, if you like, a little grated aged cheese. Serve hot, as a starter or a side.

Editor's tips

- To know where to cut, bend the spear: it snaps exactly where the woody fibre ends. That way you waste none of the tender part.
- Thin spears slip between the bars: grill them across the grate or use a grilling basket to turn them all at once without losing any.
- If you wrap them in jamón serrano, under-salt: the ham brings salt and, as it toasts, turns crisp and perfumes the asparagus.
