

PIZZA · MEDIUM

Quattro formaggi pizza on the kamado

White, no tomato, no safety net: mozzarella, gorgonzola, taleggio and Parmesan melting in layers over thin dough. With a few pear slices to finish, it borders on illegal.

TEMPERATURE

320 °C

Ingredients

500 g "00" flour, W 260-300 (100% baker's)

14 g fine sea salt (2.8%)

200 g fior di latte, very well drained (the base)

100 g taleggio, rind removed

1 ud ripe Conference pear (optional, thinly sliced)

1 pizza freshly ground black pepper

310 ml cold water (62% hydration)

1 g fresh yeast (0.2%)

80 g gorgonzola dolce

40 g coarsely grated Parmesan

1 puñado chopped walnuts (optional)

Method

1 24H DOUGH AND TEMPERED CHEESES

Standard slow-ferment dough in 200 g balls. Take the cheeses out of the fridge an hour ahead: cold gorgonzola and taleggio neither spread well nor melt on time, forcing you to overbake the base.

2 STABILISE THE KAMADO AT 320°C

Stone raised and a long preheat, but with the vents a notch more closed than for Neapolitan: we want a stable 320°C. If you are coming down from 350°C, half-close the bottom vent and give the dome 10 minutes to drop and settle.

3 LAYER THE CHEESES, BLUE LAST

Stretch to 28-30 cm. First the fior di latte as an even base, then the taleggio in blobs, the Parmesan in a shower, and finally the gorgonzola in small, separate hazelnut-sized dots: it is the most invasive and must remain islands, not a sea.

4 BAKE 3-4 MINUTES AT MEDIUM-HIGH

At 320°C a white pizza needs longer than a red one: 3-4 minutes with a 180° turn halfway. Look for cheese bubbling across the whole surface with golden flecks only at the taleggio edges. If you see oil pooling, the oven is running too hot.

5 PEAR, WALNUTS AND PEPPER TO FINISH

Off the kamado, lay on the thin pear slices, the walnuts and a crack of black pepper. Cold pear over molten cheese is the contrast that upgrades this pizza from "nice" to "who needs dessert".

Editor's tips

- Spanish substitutions that work: Picón de Tresviso for the gorgonzola (half the amount, it bites harder) and Torta del Casar for the taleggio.
- No bagged "pizza shred": it carries anti-caking starch that turns the melt grainy.
- This pizza calls for wine over beer: an acidic white (Godello, Riesling) acts as the fifth ingredient.
