

PIZZA · ADVANCED

Roman pizza al taglio on the kamado

High-hydration dough fermented 48 hours, baked in a pan and scissor-cut into rectangles like in Rome's forni. Crisp below, an open-crumbed cloud within.

PREP

2940 min

COOK

18 min

SERVINGS

6

TEMPERATURE

270 °C

Ingredients

500 g strong bread flour, W 300-350 (100%)

12 g fine sea salt (2.4%)

15 ml olive oil for the dough (3%)

400 g crushed tomato with salt and oregano (rossa base)

100 g mortadella veils and pistachios (to finish, optional)

400 ml cold water (80% hydration)

2 g fresh yeast (0.4%)

40 ml olive oil for the pan

250 g low-moisture mozzarella (second bake)

Method

1 DAY 1: MIX AND FOLD

Mix flour, water and yeast until no dry flour remains; rest 20 minutes, add salt and oil and squeeze in. Then four rounds of coil folds every 30 minutes with wet hands. The dough will go from sticky soup to glossy cushion. Into the fridge, in an oiled tub, for 48 hours.

2 DAY 3: OILED PAN AND FINAL PROOF

Three hours before baking, turn the dough into a generously oiled 30×40 cm steel pan and stretch it with flat fingers towards the corners without degassing. If it resists, wait 15 minutes and repeat. Let it proof covered until it bubbles lazily.

3 KAMADO AT 270°C, INDIRECT OVER THE STONE

A different setup from Neapolitan: deflector in AND stone on top, 40 minutes preheating at 270°C. The pan needs strong but even heat below; direct flame would burn the base oil before the crumb bakes.

4 FIRST BAKE: THE ROSSA BASE

Spread the seasoned tomato over the whole dough, right to the edges, and bake the pan on the stone for 12-14 minutes with a halfway turn. Look for edges releasing from the pan and a golden sole when you lift a corner with a spatula. At this point the "rossa" is already edible and glorious.

5 SECOND BAKE: CHEESE AND FINISHES

Pull the pan, scatter the mozzarella and return it to the kamado for 4-5 minutes, until melted with golden bubbles. The double bake is the Roman secret: the crumb is already set so the cheese cannot crush it. Out of the oven, mortadella veils over the heat and chopped pistachios.

6 CUT WITH SCISSORS AND SERVE BY WEIGHT

Slide the pizza onto a rack (never leave it in the pan: steam softens the sole) and cut rectangles with kitchen scissors, as Rome commands. Serve warm; it keeps for hours — if it survives minutes.

Editor's tips

- Blued steel or iron pan, not thin non-stick: you need thermal mass below for the "fried in oil" effect.
- The cold window is 24-72 hours: at 48 it peaks in both flavour and handling.
- Textbook Roman combos: sliced potato and rosemary; courgette and anchovy; or the naked rossa, which needs no one.

Gear for this recipe

Gi.Metal Steel Pizza Plate 40 × 35 cm (4 mm)

mikamado.es/en/accesorios/gimetal-plancha-acero-pizza-40x35

Navaris Cordierite Pizza Stone Rectangular XL (38×30×1.5 cm)

mikamado.es/en/accesorios/navaris-piedra-pizza-rect-38x30

Westmark Professional XXL Pizza Wheel Cutter (ø 10 cm)

mikamado.es/en/accesorios/westmark-cortapizzas-xxl

TODOBRASA Premium Marabú Charcoal 10 kg

mikamado.es/en/accesorios/todobrasa-marabu-premium-10kg

Full recipe at: mikamado.es/en/recetas/pizza-romana-al-taglio-kamado

As an Amazon Associate, mikamado.es earns from qualifying purchases. At no extra cost to you.