Sobrasada and honey pizza on the kamado

The Spanish twist that beats many classics: Mallorcan sobrasada melting into orange lava, aged Mahón cheese and honey to finish. Mallorca and Naples, finally at the same table.

TEMPERATURE

330 °C

Ingredients

500 g "00" flour, W 260-300 (100% baker's)

14 g fine sea salt (2.8%)

250 g fior di latte, drained

60 g aged Mahón cheese, grated

1 cda fresh thyme leaves

310 ml cold water (62% hydration)

1 g fresh yeast (0.2%)

140 g Mallorcan sobrasada (PGI if possible)

4 cdas orange-blossom or rosemary honey

Method

1 24H DOUGH, SOBRASADA INTO THE FRIDGE

Standard slow-ferment dough. Unlike the cheeses, sobrasada wants cold until the very last second: shape the dollops with two teaspoons on a plate and return it to the fridge until topping time.

2 KAMADO AT 330°C, STONE SATURATED

Stone raised, 45-60 minutes saturating at 330°C: a notch under Neapolitan so the sobrasada fat confits instead of frying. Vents three-quarters open.

3 TOP: MOZZARELLA, MAHÓN AND CRATERS

Stretch to 28-30 cm. A fior di latte base, a shower of aged Mahón and 8-10 cold sobrasada dollops, hazel-nut-sized, well spaced. No tomato: here the sobrasada's paprika is the sauce.

4 BAKE 2-3 MINUTES WITH A TURN

Centre of the stone, 180° turn at 60 seconds. The exit cue: sobrasada dollops glossy and half-melted, cheese bubbling around them. Do not wait for them to liquefy completely or the fat will flood the centre.

5 HONEY AND THYME TO FINISH

Off the kamado, a thin thread of honey aimed at the sobrasada craters and a shower of fresh thyme. Cut and serve within the minute: the contrast between hot spiced fat and cool honey is the dish.

Editor's tips

- Use soft spreading sobrasada, not the firm aged kind: the aged one never melts, it just toasts into dry crumbs.
- If you cannot find aged Mahón, an old Manchego or a grana works; you are after salt and crystal crunch, not creaminess.
- Rakish summer-evening version: add thin slices of fresh fig along with the honey when in season.
