TEMPERATURE

190 °C

Ingredients

8 ud large portobello mushrooms

80 g breadcrumbs (panko works best)

60 ml extra-virgin olive oil

1 ud dried chilli (cayenne), crumbled

6 ud garlic cloves

1 puñado chopped fresh parsley

50 g grated aged cheese (Manchego or Parmesan)

1 pizca flaky salt and black pepper

Method

1 PREP THE CAPS

Wipe the portobellos clean with a damp cloth, without soaking them. Twist out the stems and set them aside. For a drier stuffing, scrape out the dark gills with a teaspoon. Finely chop the stems.

2 SET UP INDIRECT

Light the kamado, fit the heat deflector and stabilise the dome at around 190 °C with the vents slightly open. Let the ceramic settle for about 10 minutes before cooking.

3 GARLIC PASTE

Finely chop the garlic and mix it in a bowl with the parsley, breadcrumbs, chopped stems, chilli and most of the olive oil. Work it into a moist paste that holds together when pressed. Season lightly.

4 STUFF THE CAPS

Brush the outside of each portobello with a little olive oil. Pack the cavity with the paste, pressing lightly without overfilling, and scatter the grated cheese on top.

5 GRATINATE IN THE KAMADO

Set the caps face-up on a cast-iron griddle or skillet and into the kamado, indirect. Cook with the lid closed at 190 °C for 18-22 minutes, until the mushroom is tender and the stuffing is golden.

6 REST AND SERVE

Lift out the caps and rest for 3-4 minutes: the juices reabsorb and the stuffing sets. Finish with a drizzle of raw olive oil, flaky salt and fresh parsley. Serve at once.

Editor's tips

- Pick portobellos of even size so they cook together; very large ones may need 3-4 minutes more.
- A cast-iron skillet or griddle catches the juices and concentrates them into a garlicky sauce for dipping bread.
- For a vegan version, swap the cheese for nutritional yeast and a handful of chopped toasted almonds.
